NEW LIGHT ON GEO. WASHINGTON

Sketch of His Life Printed 100 Years Ago Gives Unique Account of Cherry Tree Incident—His Father a Remarkable Man.

George Washington's birthday, which is a legal holiday by act of congress in all states and territories, will be observed, on February 22 throughout the United States. There is an episode in the life of the immortal George which relates to his killing of a favorite cherry tree of his father, that has been frequently told and his saying that he could not tell a lie cited as an example to the young to emulate. A reporter of The Freeman is the owner of a small-paged book of 198 pages, printed about 100 years ago by J. Slater, publisher, 204 Chatham Square, New York, entitled "The Life of George Washington and History of the American Revolution," that is of unusual interest as it is written far differently than the usual histories and biographies, there also being several woodcuts depicting scenes during Washington's life. Part of Chapter I, which relates to his birth and early education, his first schoolmaster, the cherry tree, and death of his father, is printed herewith.

George Washington—This, one of the greatest of men—was born the 22nd day of February, 1732, on Pope's Creek, in Westmoreland county, Virginia. His father, whose name was Augustus Washington, was also a Virginian, but his grandfather (John) was an Englishman, who came over and settled in Virginia in 1667.

His father was early married to the amiable Miss Dandridge. But after several years of domestic happiness, Mr. Washington was separated by death from this excellent woman, who left him and two children to lament her early fate.

His second marriage was to Miss Mary Ball, a young lady of fortune, and descended from one of the best families of Virginia.

Mr. Washington must have possessed either a very pleasing person, or highly polished manners, or perhaps both, for he was at that time at least 40 years old! While she was only 17.

By his first wife Mr. Washington had two children, both sons—Lawrence and Augustus. By his second wife he had five children: four sons and a daughter—George, Samuel, John, Charles and Elizabeth. It might here be observed that the greatest man that ever lived was the son of a second marriage.

The first place of education to which George was sent was a little "old field school," kept by one of his father's tenants named Hobby; an honest, poor old man, who acted in the double character of sexton and schoolmaster. On his skill as a grave digger, tradition is silent, but for a teacher of youth, his qualifications were certainly of the humblest sort; making what is generally called an A B C schoolmaster. Such was the preceptor who first taught Washington the knowledge of letters! Hobby lived to see his pupil in all his glory, and rejoiced exceedingly. He used to boast that "twas he, who between his knees, had laid the foundation of George Washington's greatness."

The wise Ulysses never took more pains with his beloved Telemachus than did Mr. Washington with George to inspire him with an early love of truth. The following anecdote is related, in illustration of the manner in which he was brought to the mind of our hero, at a very early age.

When George was about six years old, he was made the wealthy master of a hatchet, of which, like most little boys, he was exceedingly fond; and was constantly going about chopping everything that came his way. One day, in the garden, where he often amused himself hacking his mother's pea-sticks, he unluckily tried the edge of his hatchet on the body of a beautiful young English cherry tree, which he barked so terribly that the tree never got the better of it. The next morning the old gentleman, finding out what had befallen his tree, which, by the by, was a great favorite, came into the house, and with much warmth, asked for the mischievous author, declaring at the same time, that he would not have taken five guineas for his tree. Nobody could tell him anything about it. Presently George and his hatchet made their appearance. "George," said the father, "do you know who killed that beautiful little cherry tree yonder in the garden?" This was a tough question, and George staggered under it for a moment, but quickly recovered himself, and looking at his father with the sweet face of youth brightened with the inexpressible charm of all-conquering truth, he bravely cried out: "I can't tell a lie, pa: you know I can't tell a lie. I did cut it with my hatchet." "Rush to my arms, you dearest boy," cried his father in transports, "run to my arms; glad am I, George, that you killed my tree, for you have paid me for it a thousand fold. Such an act of heroism in my son is worth more than a thousand trees, though blowdown with silver and their fruits of purest gold."

It was in this way, by interesting at once both his heart and head, that Mr. Washington conducted George with great ease and pleasure along the happy paths of virtue.

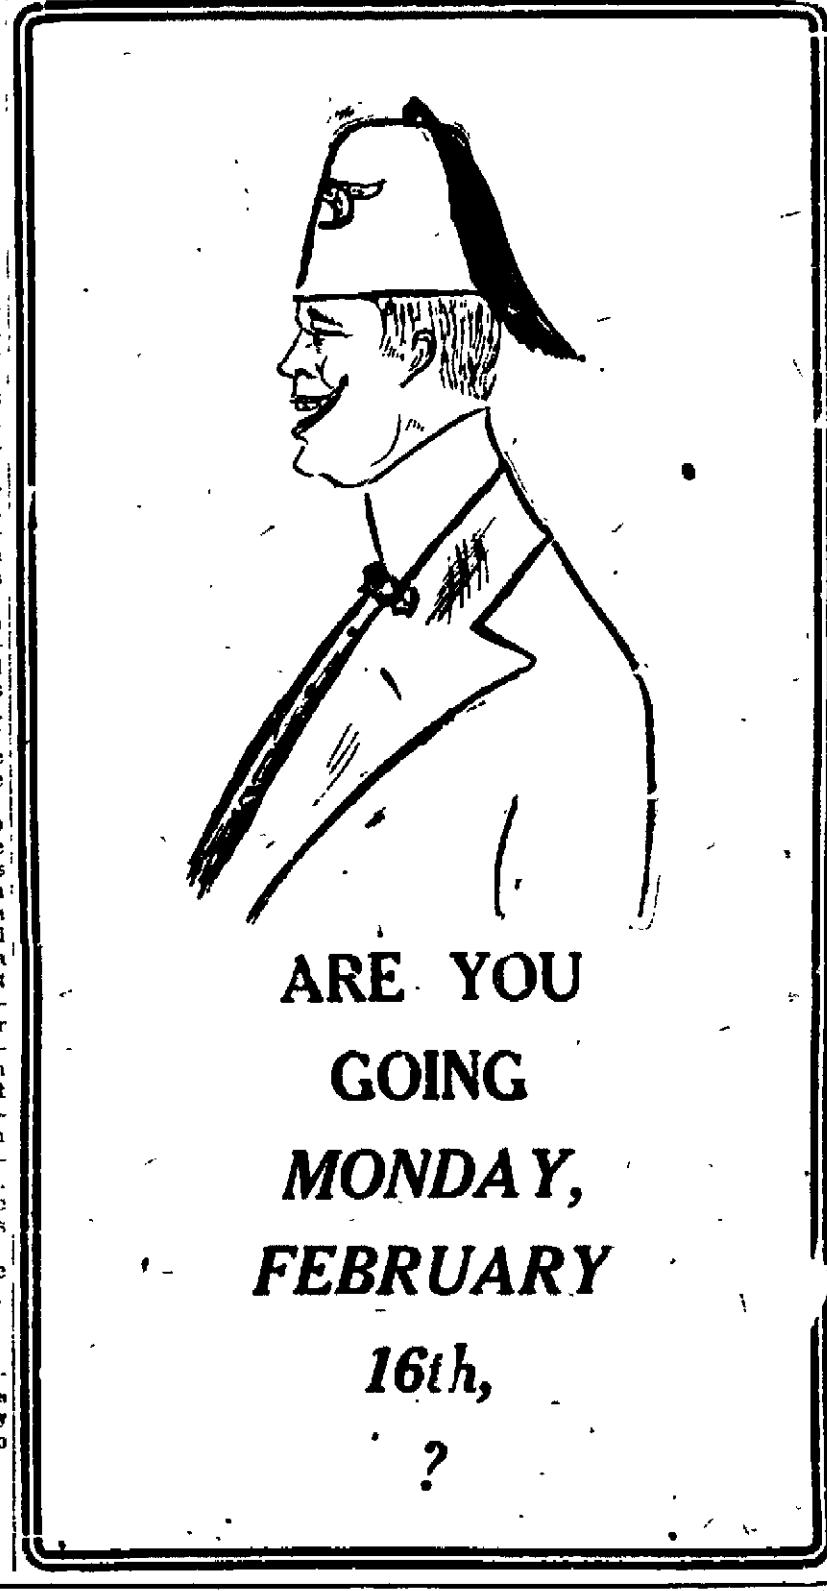

George was not, however, long to enjoy the pleasure or profit of such a companion, for scarcely had he attained his tenth year, before his father was seized with the gout in his stomach, which carried him off in a few days.

Concerning Epidemics

In Epidemics the germ fastens most readily on fruitful soil—a system that is in poor condition.

Stoppage of food waste, and the resulting decay, generates poisons which are absorbed by the blood, lowering its power of resistance to withstand the attack of outside germs such as influenza.

In plain terms, constipation encourages Epidemics.

If you keep your intestinal passage clear and functioning regularly to get rid of this waste, your system will be kept in good condition to successfully cope with disease germs to which you may be exposed.

That is what the Nujol Treatment does—without straining, and without drawing on the vitality of other parts of the body, as do other forms of treatment.

In plain terms, Nujol discourages constipation and its dangerous consequences.

Keep your body clean inside with the Nujol Treatment. It is the best possible Sickness Prevention.

Nujol is sold by all druggists in bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. Beware of products represented to be "the same as Nujol." You may suffer from substitutes.

View on Derwentwater.

THE lake district of England, one of the most beautiful of regions, always has been a favorite resort of American tourists, not only because of its natural attractions, but also on account of its literary associations.

First among recorded tourists to Lakeland was Gray, the poet, author of the "Elegy in a Country Churchyard," says Country Life. He visited the Westmoreland and Cumberland lakes in 1769, the year before Wordsworth, the most outstanding among the lake school of poets, was born. He discovered the lakes, alike in a touring and literary sense, and being essentially of the eighteenth century, he fled from them and the grandeur of their scenery in dismay. For not then had the picturesque been invented. The beauties of wild nature were not appreciated, and had they been the roads of that age and the lack of proper accommodation were powerful deterrents.

But for close upon a century Lakeland has been a greatly appreciated touring ground. Scenery and the literary associations with Wordsworth, Southey, Coleridge, De Quincey and their circle, have attracted every type of holiday maker. First came the vacation reading parties of university students, then the honeymoon couples, to whom the Low Wood hotel, Ambleside, was once, in a sense, sacred; and then the railways brought tourists from far and near. But not until the automobile came upon the roads was Lakeland comfortably or thoroughly to be explored.

The tourist by motor car here has choice of every kind of road, or no road, and may, if he will, take his sport in pass-storming with the most adventurous, or take his sight-seeing along roads as good as any in this country. It is all a matter of taste and inclination. The ideal way of seeing Lakeland is undoubtedly that of selecting some central spot at which to stay and taking from it daily, out and home, excursions. This is so for several reasons; chief among them that of the somewhat limited area of the lake district, which may be stated at about thirty miles square. The lakes figure so largely in popular imagination that this will seem scarcely credible; yet any reference to maps will prove the truth of it. But it does not follow from this sheer matter-of-fact measurement that this region is easily seen or soon exhausted.

Grasmere in the Center.
Exactly in the center of the lake district is Grasmere, central geographically, and in its interest, for it was Wordsworth's home, and in its churchyard he lies.

There are five recognized centers for tourists in these regions: Windermere, Ambleside and Grasmere, about equidistant, some four miles from one another; Keswick, thirteen miles further north, and Conistone, somewhat isolated, seven miles southwest of Ambleside. It would be a thankless task to declare any preference among these, but we will take Grasmere as the very focus of the lakes.

Grasmere village is a sweet and gracious place. Here Wordsworth resided for more than fifty years. His later homes here are not accessible, but Dove Cottage, where he wrote his earliest and best, has been preserved as it was in his day, and is the resort of literary pilgrims, while the unpretending church beside the River Rotha is much the same as he knew it. That is an interesting day trip, along excellent roads, which takes us north to Cockermouth, the old market town at the extreme northerly edge of Lakeland, where his birthplace, in Main street, is still shown.

The way runs by Dunmail Raise to Wythburn, whose little church, one of the smallest in England, is neighbored by the Nag's Head Inn, where the old drafsmen and their wives put up their horses while attending service in older times. The road then runs alongside Thirlmere, with the imposing mountain, Helvellyn, 3,118 feet, on right. Keswick town comes next; a considerable place for this part of the country, and with an oddly foreign appearance, caused chiefly by the church-like building (really the town hall) in the middle of the street. The chief industry is the making of lead pencils.

Derwentwater Loveliest Lake.
But Derwentwater itself is the real reward of the journey. It is generally considered the loveliest of all the lakes, and it is also the most accessible, a good road encircling it. Beyond Keswick we pass Greta Hall, over the house of Southey, and come to Bassenthwaite Water. Preferably taking the left-hand road, Skiddaw, 3,064 feet, is seen across the water. Cockermouth is some six miles further.

Returning from that town, the other side of Bassenthwaite Water may be taken, and the rest of the way back to Grasmere is identical with the outward run. The distance, including the circuit of Derwentwater, is about seventy-six miles.

But Derwentwater is worth a more leisurely trip, for its own sake. The trip from Grasmere to Keswick and the circuit of Derwentwater and back is thirty-five miles. The advantages are with the tourist proceeding to Keswick and there turning left and past the church, following the eastern side of the lake to Lodore, where the "Falls of Lodore," sung by Southey, will be found. Beyond we come to Shepherd's Crag, overhanging the road, and past the Borrowdale hotel and the narrow pass called the "Jaws of Borrowdale," whose rocks so greatly alarmed Gray 150 years ago. At Grange where the River Derwent flows out of Derwentwater, the road abruptly turns, to follow the western lakeside. In the pleasant vale at Grange is that giant rock, the "Bowler Stone."

The peculiar advantages of staying at Grasmere are many. Not least among them is that within five miles you have not only Grasmere itself, rivaling Derwentwater for loveliness, but Rydal Water, and the town of Ambleside, with Windermere, the largest and most popular of the lakes beyond. All are within an easy walk for the tourist staying at Grasmere, who will scarce take out his car when he can indulge in pleasant footpath rambles for a change.

The car is for farther afield. For example, the run to Penrith, along Ullswater. The out and home run is fifty-six miles. The best way from Grasmere is to take the Windermere road, as far as Waterhead; thence turning to the left and up to Troutbeck. The nearer route, up from Ambleside to Kirkstone Pass, is an exceedingly steep climb, but it can be taken on the return.

On the way to Ullswater the gloomy little mountain town of Brothers Water is passed, and then comes the descent to pleasant, sunny Patterdale. Here the seven miles long lake of Ullswater, the second longest of the lakes, begins, skirted all the way by a delightful road, with the waterfall of Alra Force midway, spouting from its woody glen. Ullswater ends at Pooley Bridge, whence it is seven and a half miles into the quaint old market town of Penrith, passing Yanwath Hall, now a farm house, but a good surviving specimen of the fifteenth century fortified border residence; and thence over the ancient Eamont Bridge, built in 1225.

FACTS AND FIGURES OF WAR

Immensity of Supplies Needed in Modern Conflict Revealed by Sir Douglas Haig.

These are some of the amazing facts in Sir Douglas Haig's final dispatch: General headquarters received 9,000 telegrams in one day, and 3,400 letters by dispatch-riders. One army headquarters had 10,000 telegrams in a day, and the daily telegrams on the lines of communication were 23,000.

There were 1,500 miles of telegraphs and telephones, and 3,658 miles of railways, on which 1,800 trains ran weekly.

In six weeks 5,000,000 rations were supplied, by our armies in France, to 800,000 civilians in the relieved areas. Two hundred tons dead weight of supplies and stores were required daily for the maintenance of each division.

The total daily ration strength of our armies was 2,700,000. An addition of one ounce to each man's rations represented an extra 75 tons.

Over 400,000 horses and mules and 46,700 motor vehicles were used, and 4,500 miles of road made or maintained.

In 1914 there was one machine gun to 500 infantrymen in the British army; when peace came there was one machine gun to 20 infantrymen.

Over 700,000 tons of ammunition were fired by our artillery on the western front from August, 1918, to the armistice.—Montreal Herald.

Children's Spending Money.

The practice of doling out money to the children by driblets, when they tease for it, and without holding them to any responsibility in the matter of spending it, is undoubtedly responsible for most of the prevalent unthrift among our young people. It is quite natural that this childish attitude toward money should continue even into the period when the young person becomes a money-earner on his own account, and oftentimes, into his adult life as well.—Tariff Magazine.

"Saint Anthony Guide."

The letters S. A. G., when written on the reverse side of an envelope over the sealed flap, are an abbreviation of the phrase "Saint Anthony guide," which is an invitation to the saint to direct the letter to its destination. The Catholic Encyclopedia says: "The name of St. Anthony's miracles has never been diminished, and even at the present day he is acknowledged as the greatest thaumaturge of the times. He is especially invoked for the recovery of 'thoum lost'."

Japanese Shrewdness.
An interesting illustration of Japanese shrewdness, which a Connecticut Yankee might envy, was given in a deal in copper. The war caused an extraordinary demand for this metal, and sent the price soaring. The coin still in common circulation in China is the copper "cash," about the size of an English penny, and so small in value that a gold dollar will buy anywhere from 1,000 to 2,000 of them, according to the rate of exchange. In my travels in the interior of China I had to have an extra donkey to carry the cash needed for my party. The copper cash in the province of Shantung alone would weigh nearly 50,000 tons. To buy these cash of the Chinese and sell them to the Europeans, who needed the copper for shells, would yield a handsome profit. The Japanese proceeded to do it. The Manchuria Daily News reported that in a single year the purchases amounted to 25,000 tons and that the transaction was completed at a profit of 2,167,000 yen ($1,083,500).—Asia Magazine.

PRINCESS ANNE'S PASSENGERS BEING TAKEN OFF

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Feb. 7.—The police patrol started to remove the 32 passengers from the Old Dominion liner, Princess Anne, stranded off Rockaway Point, shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. They will be landed at the Battery, in this city, it was said.

Shortly after noon short cutters believed that all the passengers had been removed. At the Old Dominion Line office an official said they had reports that 15 or 20 had been removed.

The launching of the rescue had been accomplished only after the greatest difficulty. One man was washed overboard from the boat, but was pulled back in safety.

UPTOWN GARAGE.

Plans Call For Big Up To Date Building on Clinton Avenue.

Plans are being formulated for the erection of a large garage in the upper part of the city, which if erected, and there is every indication it will be, is to be up to date not only in construction but as to equipment. The location will be on Clinton avenue, with a two story building with attractive frontage of 25 feet at the head of Main street, between the residence of Dr. Wright G. Smith and the Stuyvesant garage, Connecticut at the rear will be the garage proper, a concrete one story building with heavy iron girders, and four exits to allow users to go out quickly and thus save time. The promoters of the enterprise are considering the practicability of making the garage of two stories and use the second floor of the garage, which according to the tentative plans will be 62,000 feet, as an assembly hall for dances and lectures, and which could easily be converted into a moving picture theatre.

WHAT CHASE'S SQUARE DEAL IS

Editor Freeman,
Dear Sir:—I think that ordinarily no attention should be paid to a communication to which the writer is unwilling to sign, but this may be an exception to the rule.

In your issue of February 4, "An Objector" asks what I mean in a previous communication in The Freeman by a "square deal" for the trolley company.

I mean that the fare should be large enough to pay a fair income on the capital invested. It is not a square deal to make the company use $3,000 in a year in giving of what many believe to be good service.

I have ridden on trolley cars in Boston and in San Francisco, as well as in several towns and cities between these points, and I do not recall having received any better service anywhere than in our own city of Kingston.

I patronize our home cars often—a book of tickets is used all too soon. (I wonder why those who use the trolley to any extent do not use tickets?)

I have not infrequently been on crowded cars. When a man was once asked if he had room on the car he replied: "Yes, I had a strap all to myself." I have not always been so fortunate. But the crowds are ordinarily good natured.

There has sometimes been a shortage of cars at the close of a lecture or entertainment, but it was not always the fault of the trolley company. When the company are apprised of the needs, as was the case Friday night, ample room is provided.

No single thing of a purely local character is of as much importance to Kingston as the trolley line.

Has anyone ever considered what would be the result if we should drive the trolley out of business?

It was a little strange that in the very next column of The Freeman an issue was raised stating that the Poughkeepsie and Wappingers Falls Railway Company was asking for an eight cent fare.

With nearly everything costing from two to three times as much as formerly, it goes without saying that our trolley fare is the cheapest thing we have.

With the great increase in the cost of labor and fuel, the trolley line has not a "square deal" at the present rates.

The discontinuance of the line on Washington avenue would not be an injury to those who live near it alone. What hurts one part of our city injures the whole, and as I showed in a previous article, it would be a terrible blow to the growth of Kingston. For if we grow as we should, the larger part of the growth will necessarily be west of Washington avenue.

P. N. CHASE.

SECRETARY LANE QUILTS CABINET

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Secretary of the Interior Lane has tendered his resignation to President Wilson, effective March 1. It was announced at the White House this afternoon. It is understood Mr. Lane will become president of the Sinclair Oil Company, a developing corporation.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Feb. 7.—There was a fairly strong tone to the market at the opening today but after the first few minutes a reaction set in that not only wiped out the most of the early gains but brought many stocks materially below yesterday's close. United States Steel Common fell from 100 1/2 to 99 1/2, while Republic Steel after selling at 108 fell to 106 1/2 and Baldwin reacted falling nearly two points to 109 1/2. Mexican Petroleum yielded over 2 points from its first price and similar movements were noted in the other oil shares. Southern Pacific after selling up to 95 1/2, fell over a point. Pierce Arrow broke nearly four points from its early rise to 58 1/2 and General Motor after opening at 27 yielded over five points.

An increased demand was noted all through the list in the last hour of trading today. The irregular movements of the first hour were followed by general advances extending in some stocks to over five points. U. S. Steel attracted most attention because of the broader demand, on which that stock rose 1 point to 100 1/2. Baldwin advanced to 112, but reacted from this price in the last few minutes of dealing. Some recessions were noted in other issues. In the closing trading the final tone was irregular. Government bonds were firm, railway and other bonds were steady.

After the recessions of the first half hour the market developed a firmer tone and nearly all the leading issues moved up to a range well above Friday's closing levels. U. S. Steel Common, after selling down to 99 1/2 rallied to 100 1/2. Republic rose from 106 1/2 to 107 1/2. Bethlehem Steel C from 90 1/2 to 91 1/2 and Baldwin from 107 1/2 to 109 1/2. Studebaker rallied over 2 points. The oil issues also recovered all of their earlier losses.

BAKER IMPROVES ARMY SERVICE

Secretary's Introduction of Educational System a Big Factor in Removing Drawbacks of Soldier Life. A few years before the war a prominent army officer, who had risen from the ranks, told a group of recruits that an enlistment in the United States army offered 99 advantages and but one disadvantage—the lack of educational facilities at regular army posts.

The secretary of war, carrying into execution plans based upon the lessons of the late war, has now inaugurated the educational system in the service which will make the army from now "A University in Khaki." The last drawback to army service has not only been removed, but another advantage added to the already long list.

The trades which cause men to die prematurely pay high wages in order to attract young men, but the wise man will work for less in order to keep his health.

The young man then who is wise will choose in the first place an occupation where he will not endanger his health and if he is very wise he will try to get a job where his body may be fully developed and his strength may be improved. Nowhere is there a job awaiting a young man which not only does not jeopardize his health, but offers every opportunity for improvement in strength as the United States army.

From the first day the army looks after the health of its men. At no time is a soldier more than a few hours from medical attention. On the first day the recruit is thoroughly examined from head to foot by officers who are authorities in that line. If there is the slightest thing wrong with the man they will find it. So thorough is the test that defects, which at the time seem trifling, are discovered and remedied, which have been known, when undiscovered, to enlarge until they menaced the life of the afflicted person.

It is erroneous to believe that the army will not take a man who is not in perfect health. There are many little ailments which keep a man from being in perfect condition which army physicians and surgeons may remedy in a short time.

Accordingly, men suffering from flat feet, first degree, are often accepted in the army and soon cured of this defect by army medical men. The life in the open soon makes for the best of health. It is a well-known fact that open air existence is the best for people. On account of the sanitary living conditions in the army tuberculosis, which is the greatest plague of civilian life, is practically unknown. In the last year of peace the army death rate for men between the ages of 20 and 30 was far below the rate for the same class in civilian life, which is probably the best proof of the statement that the army offers the healthiest employment. The figure was approximately four deaths per 100,000 in the army as against seven per 100,000 among civilians.

The regular habits acquired by the military are responsible in a large way for the excellent health enjoyed by men of the service. Scientific men have long agreed that regular hours for eating and sleeping were highly conducive to the physical well-being and longevity.

The food in the army is based on the best scientific data as to the requirements of individuals and meals are varied for the best results.

The hospitals in the army are models widely duplicated in civilian life, and the medical service is the most efficient and successful to be found anywhere. No new remedy appears but what the army medical authorities have it first.

The young man, then, casting about for a job and with an eye to the future, might well consider an enlistment in the army; for there his health, his most valuable asset, would be carefully looked after, and, if possible, improved so that when he is discharged he goes back into civilian life a better man.

It has been a source of comment throughout the country that the boys who left their homes 1917 and 1918 to join the colors came back looking better than when they went away. It is believed by many that if a record were compiled it would show that the average man gained many pounds in weight while he was in the service. This is added proof to the statement that the open life, regular hours, wholesome diet and careful medical attention secure the health of the soldier.

The recruiting office in Kingston is located in the central post office in charge of Sergeant John J. Farrell and Sergeant Carron.
